

I'm totally in favor of completely dropping the Morse Code requirements for ANY amateur radio licensing. It's time for the service to develop an eye for the future and quit being obsessed with the past. Let's develop more comprehensive testing aimed at digital and analog modes with MUCH MORE emphasis on being able to build, repair and diagnose problems with one's equipment, antennas et.al. Time has come to take the question pool questions off the internet, where one has only to memorize answers to pass the test, and put the emphasis on LEARNING and UNDERSTANDING radio concepts and theory. Thanks for this opportunity to express my opinion.
